A Celebration of African and Caribbean Stories from the RAF MUSEUM

Wednesday 4th October, 2pm

To mark Black History Month join Rhiannon Watkinson from the Royal Air Force Museum London for a talk exploring the fascinating lives of some incredible African and Caribbean personnel.

Discover the story of the first Black pilot who trained and flew for Britain, take in the trials and triumphs of a female Second World War instrument repairer and marvel at a modern-day fighter pilot's journey from Woolwich to earning his wings. This talk includes images from the museum's archive as well as a chance to ask questions and share stories.

This event will be available to watch via YouTube, please contact us to register your interest.
